Are you a victim of scrap tire dumping?

Ohio EPA wants to help.

When faced with the cost and time involved in cleaning up illegally dumped tires, many victims feel overwhelmed and don’t know where to turn for help. Ohio EPA’s scrap tire cleanup program could be the answer you’re looking for.
Through the program, Ohio EPA works with eligible property owners to safely and affordably clean up the mess. If you were unaware of the illegal tire dumping, inherited the property or even tried to prevent the dumping, you may qualify for help.

Sites must contain at least 100 but no more than 5,000 scrap tires. Tires may be any size and may be un-mounted or on rims. If there is other waste dumped with the tires, Ohio EPA may be able to help address it as well during the cleanup.

Besides being a nuisance and public safety concern, improperly managed scrap tires can serve as breeding grounds for disease-carrying mosquitoes and are an inherent fire risk. Scrap tire fires generate toxic smoke and oil that can put your residents at risk as well as contaminate nearby surface water and ground water resources.
